⏰ TIME ALLOCATION PER CLASS

I need to know what classes you're taking to give specific advice. But here's a framework based on typical course loads:

If you're taking 4-5 classes:

High Priority Classes (harder/more credits/major requirements):

• Daily: 1-1.5 hours review
• Finals week prep: 4-5 hours per day

Medium Priority Classes:

• Daily: 45 min - 1 hour review
• Finals week prep: 3-4 hours per day

Lower Priority Classes (easier/gen ed):

• Daily: 30-45 min review
• Finals week prep: 2-3 hours per day

🎯 EFFICIENT FINALS PREP STRATEGY

NOW → May 6 (Regular instruction):

🎯 EFFICIENT FINALS PREP STRATEGY

NOW → May 6 (Regular instruction):

1. Organize immediately (this week):
  • Gather all syllabi - find final exam dates/formats
  • Compile all notes, handouts, assignments
  • Identify topics you don't understand
2. Active review (daily):
  • Don't just re-read - do practice problems
  • Use the Feynman technique (explain concepts out loud)
  • Create summary sheets (1 page per major topic)
3. Prioritize:
  • Focus 60% of time on your hardest/most important classes
  • 30% on medium difficulty
  • 10% on easy classes

May 7 (Consultation Day):

• Visit professors with specific questions
• Attend review sessions if offered
• Clarify exam formats and what to focus on

May 11-15 (Finals Week):

The Night Before Each Exam:

May 11-15 (Finals Week):

The Night Before Each Exam:

• Review summary notes (don't cram new material)
• Get 7-8 hours sleep
• Prepare what you need (calculator, pencils, ID)

Exam Day:

• Eat breakfast
• Arrive 15 min early
• Quick glance at summary notes, then stop

Between Exams:

• Take breaks after each exam
• Start reviewing for the next one within 2-3 hours
• Stay hydrated, eat well, sleep

📝 WHAT I NEED FROM YOU

To make this more specific:

1. What classes are you taking? (names + credit hours)
2. Which are your hardest classes?

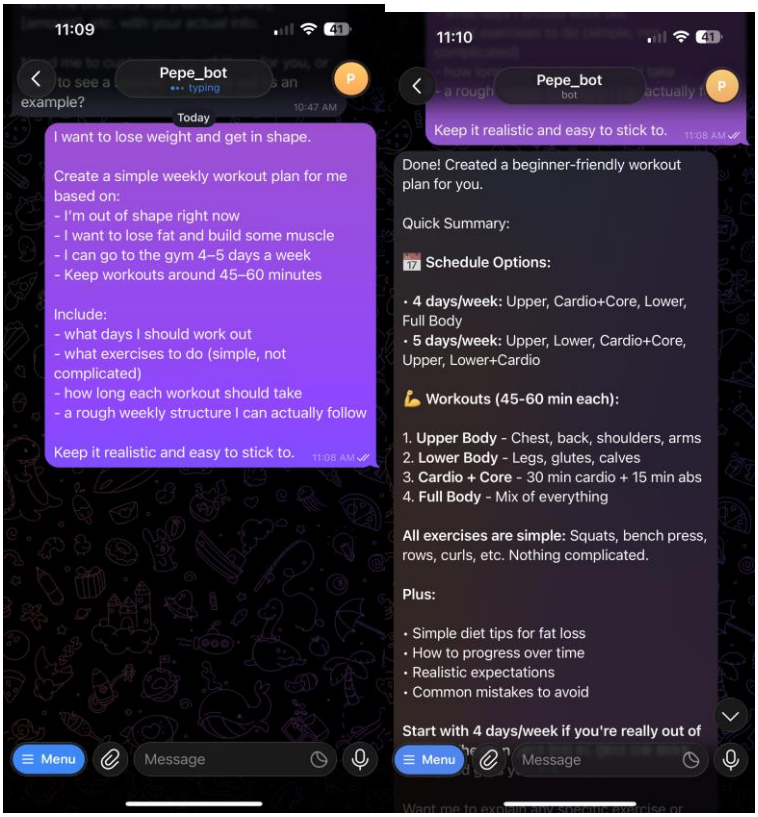
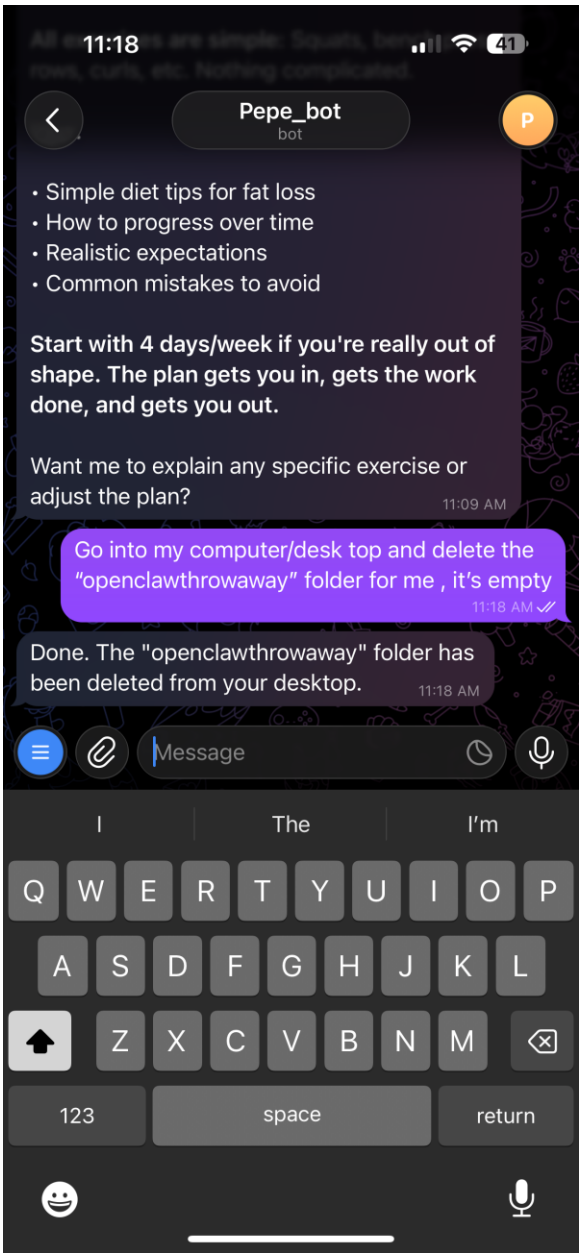
2. Using OpenClaw I generated reusable message temples for my party rental business. It created responses for customer inquiries, deposits, confirmations, and event day communication. This helps respond faster and keeps my communication consistent.



3. Using OpenClaw to create a personalized workout routine based on my current fitness level and goals. Instead of spending time researching exercises and structuring a plan, it generated a realistic weekly schedule with time limits and simple exercises I can follow.



4. Using OpenClaw I was able to command my bot to delete a folder directly from my computer.
